SENATE VOTES DOWN PROPOSAL TO EXPAND FBI SURVEILLANCE POWERS

The U.S. Senate on Wednesday voted down a Republican-backed proposal to expand the Federal Bureau of Investigation's secretive surveillance powers after the mass shooting at an Orlando gay nightclub last week. The legislation would have broadened the type of telephone and internet records the FBI could request from companies like Alphabet Inc. and Verizon without a warrant to include email metadata and some internet browsing activity. ## MICHIGAN AG SUES TWO COMPANIES IN FLINT WATER CRISIS

2 The Michigan attorney general said on Wednesday his office has sued two engineering services companies for "botching" their roles in the city of Flint's drinking water crisis that exposed residents to dangerously high lead levels. Attorney General Bill Schuette said at a news conference in Flint that the civil lawsuit was filed in Genesee County Circuit Court against Veolia Environnement SA and Houston-based Lockwood, Andrews & Newnam. The lawsuit charged Veolia with professional negligence and fraud that caused Flint's the lead poisoning to continue and worsen, and LAN with professional negligence. Schuette said the state is seeking damages from the companies that could total hundreds of millions of dollars. His office said additional claims against the firms or others may be filed in the future. REUTERS

MICHIGAN MAN CHARGED WITH KILLING 5 CYCLISTS NOW FACING 14 CHARGES

3 A Michigan driver charged with murder in the deaths of five cyclists is also being charged with five counts of operating a vehicle while intoxicated causing death, Kalamazoo County Prosecuting Attorney Jeff Getting said on Wednesday. In addition, Charles Edward Pickett Jr. was charged with four counts of operating a vehicle while intoxicated causing serious injury related to four additional cyclists who were hurt in the same June 7 car crash, bringing to 14 the total number of charges against him. Getting said Pickett was under the influence of a controlled substance at the time of the crash. He did not elaborate. The cyclists were struck along the shoulder of a road in Cooper Township, 45 miles south of Grand Rapids, Michigan. Five of the cyclists were pronounced dead at the scene. REUTERS

Uber, Lyft, taxi drivers to settle things in the ring

Celebrity Boxing will settle the rivalries roiling the cab world in the boxing ring.

Celebrity boxing promoter Damon Feldman announced two upcoming matches between Uber, Lyft, and taxi drivers, at a law office in Center City on Wednesday. Here, Uber driver Johnson Jeannot and taxi driver Mike Davis. CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Three drivers representing Uber and Lyft and one traditional cab driver are headed to a Philly boxing ring this summer to settle their differences with their fists.

"Battle of the Drivers," announced Wednesday by Celebrity Boxing promoter Damon Feldman, will feature two main fights: an Uber driver versus a Lyft driver, and an undercard match between an Uber driver and a regular cabbie.

And the trash talk has already begun.

"Uber is everywhere, we ain't going nowhere. Whether you Lyft, cabs, we don't care," said George Robertson Storm, an Uber driver with an average rating of 4.71 stars during the fight announcement at the office of co-organizer and attorney Jason Fine. "Uber is here to stay. Y'all can say you gonna take us out, it's never gonna happen. There's too many of us out here. We out here to stay and we helping a lot of people too. It's free enterprise, free world, free country."

Storm, 37, who has been driving for Uber since March 2015, will face off against a Lyft driver with whom he got into a physical altercation over a fare three months ago in Center City. The two faced each other but kept it professional during the announcement on Wednesday.

Lyft driver Dan "Danny Mac" MacMinn, 39, said he was summoned to pick up a young woman, but saw Storm pick her up instead.

Tickets and matches

Tickets go on sale June 23 on Webtix.com for the match-up, which is scheduled for Aug. 19 at the Wyndham Garden Hotel in Essington.

MacMinn said he reached into the Uber driver's window to push Storm, which led to a shoving match on the street between the two as a crowd watched, before Storm drove off with the woman.

"Everybody's pretty cool with Uber. Sometimes cabbies shout out their window at you, but with Lyft, I thought we was on the same team," Storm said of the squabble. "I was upset, and I do want to fight him."

Storm said the woman at the center of the fracas was unperturbed and he safely delivered her to her destination a short time later. "Still a five-star ride," he said.

"It's definitely not over. I'm gonna step in the ring with the man that I got in the tussle with on the street and we're gonna see who's the better driver out there," said MacMinn, a southpaw from Prospect Park who said he has been a street fighter all his life.

Meanwhile, the undercard match may go toward settling city cabbies' long-standing beef with Uber, which has been demonstrated in numerous protests around the city.

"I've been ready to beat some ass for a while now. I'm representing 20,000 to 30,000 Philadelphia cab drivers right now, and you're about to realize, all of that anger that they have, I'm carrying it on my shoulders," cabbie Mike Davis, 32, a driver for five years from West Oak Lane said heatedly, pointing his finger at the Uber driver he's set to fight. "We have to stand up and unite against what's going on. There's no business coming in. Uber's sucking it all up."

His opponent, Uber driver Johnson Jeannot, 33, said regular cabs are a dying institution.

"I don't give a damn about you losing your job or you not having enough rides. If you were doing your job, you wouldn't be having no Uber or Lyft," Jeannot responded to Davis.

Uber and Lyft are both technically still illegal in Philadelphia, although a regulatory compromise hammered out recently in Harrisburg, if passed into law, would legalize them under the supervision of the Philadelphia Parking Authority.

The match is being promoted by World Xtreme Entertainment. Feldman and Fine said the boxers will vie for cash prizes and pride.

Feldman has organized Celebrity Boxing matches involving people like "Tan Mom" Patricia Krentcil, "Milf Mom" Angela Cottone, Jose Canseco, Tanya Harding and Rodney King.

But his reputation buckled in recent years as public outcry led to the cancelation of a planned fight between rapper DMX and George Zimmerman, who killed Trayvon Martin.

DRPA announces 9/11 memorial for Philly

The DRPA approved construction of a memorial near the Ben Franklin Bridge Wednesday.

A rendering of the memorial DRPA

The Delaware River Port Authority board approved Wednesday plans to erect a memorial commemorating the 9/11 terror attacks.

The memorial will be built on a triangular DRPA-owned plot of land at Fifth and Race streets, adjacent to the National Constitution Center and the entrance to the Ben Franklin Bridge.

The DRPA said in its board meeting Wednesday morning that planners for the memorial hope to complete construction by Sept. 11 this year to commemorate the 15th anniversary of the terrorist attacks.

Proposed renderings show two towers, each 9 feet 11 inches tall, with a replica of the Liberty Bell hanging between them. Artifacts from the attack sites will be prominently featured: steel from the World Trade Center, a block of limestone granite from the Pentagon and soil from the crash site of Flight 93.

All labor, materials and work have been donated by volunteers, the DRPA board said.

There would be no cost to the agency except for the land and maintenance, which DRPA already does.

"Kudos goes out to whoever started this and whoever had to put the time in to get the materials and so forth," Commissioner E. Frank DiAntonio said.

DNC PREP

Philadelphia set to open abandoned prison for DNC

With thousands of protesters planning to descend on Philadelphia next month during the Democratic National Convention, the city is readying itself for the possibility of prisoner overflow.

The city's now-defunct Holmesburg Prison will be reopening during the DNC, July 25-28, to hold arrested protesters if necessary, the Inquirer reported.

"If we had to activate Holmesburg, that would be out of necessity for a mass-arrest kind of processing situation," said Shawn Hawes, a spokeswoman for the Department of Prisons. "We're always ready to open whenever necessary, so, like the city, we're hoping for the best, preparing just in case."

Hawes added that if Holmesburg was reactivated, arrested protesters would be held in the prison's recently renovated gymnasium, not the cell blocks. Processing a person typically takes from eight to 24 hours before they can post bail or are transferred to another facility.

The gym has 100 beds, showers and air-conditioning, Hawes said.

Philly has issued 13 demonstration permits so far, and the city expects more than 50,000 people to attend protests alone, but the city said it doesn't plan to crack down on protesters demonstrating without permits.

Still, Bernie Sanders supporters practiced getting arrested last weekend ahead of convention concerns.

Built in 1895, Holmesburg is notorious for a violent past that has included shootings, stabbings, beatings, rapes, riots and decades of human experimentation.

Renowned dermatologist Albert Kligman's experiments on inmates eventually became a catalyst for federal restrictions on human testing, the New York Times reported at Kligman's death in 2010.

For nearly two decades, Kligman conducted research on behalf of pharmaceutical companies and government agencies. Prisoners were directly exposed to pathogens like the herpes virus and the athlete's foot fungus.

When it closed in 1995, the city transitioned to the nearby Curran-Fromhold Correctional Facility. ALEXIS SACHDEV

‘Live at the Dump’ turns trash into art

Organizers: Performances amid construction, demolition waste immerses audience in sustainability.

@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Martha McDonald’s “Songs of Memory and Forgetting,” a commissioned performance by RAIR as part of the “Live at the Dump” series. LUCIA THOMÉ

Where some see trash, others see art.

When the Northeast Philadelphia recycling center Revolution Recovery and the nonprofit Recycled Artist in Residency (RAIR) program opened its gates June 12 for the debut of “Live at the Dump,” their goal was to offer a unique perspective on the creative process for artist and audience alike.

RAIR’s co-founder and director Billy Dufala and debut “Dump” performer Martha McDonald fashioned a new live venue from rubble, refuse and stone.

The pair’s performances June 12 and 19 will be followed up with “Live at the Dump’s” next event on Sunday, June 26, when sculptor Tom Sachs and Creative Time artistic director Nato Thompson discuss the axis of trash and art with a barbecue following their chat.

“We are imbedded in an active construction and demolition waste recycling facility, in a huge cement yard surrounded by mountains of broken drywall, rubble and twisted metal,” says opera singing performance artist Martha McDonald of the mix of construction material and demolition trash — the personal flotsam of one’s life with memories attached.

“There is humor and pathos there, which is pretty much what it’s like at the dump,” said McDonald.

Dufala said their mission was to create awareness about sustainability through art and design.

“We do this by putting artists in the middle of a waste stream that most people outside of the trash industry will never see. We make it visible in alternative ways; make people confront it with a different perspective, from both outside and inside the industry,” he said.

Lucia Thome, RAIR’s director of special projects, says the central reason they make art at and from Revolution Recovery and bring audiences to see it is to discover where their trash goes and how it is recycled, literally and figuratively.

“Most people have never been to a recycling center or dump,” says Thome. “No finger wagging or preaching about how we could or should be less wasteful.”

Thome and Dufala have been working with Revolution Recovery since 2010, introducing other artists to the sites and permitting them to create work built from scratch and trash.

A 2015 grant from Pew Center for Arts & Heritage helped RAIR figure out new ways of bringing audiences to the site. Having McDonald — a legendary site-specific artist — perform her “Songs of Memory and Forgetting” in the trash heap made for a stunning, apt display of artist and setting.

She strolled through trash she collected for the sake of poignancy and led the audience of about 200 through the cement yard, singing and activating objects with the audience behind her, moving through the trash-lined space, Dufala and Thome worked the heavy equipment — tractors, cranes — choreographed like dancers.

CARJACKING

Man violently carjacks 82-year-old woman in ShopRite parking lot

Police are trying to find a man wanted in connection with the violent weekend carjacking of an 82-year-old woman in Hainesport, New Jersey.

Authorities said the woman was sitting in a 2015 Toyota Rav 4 with the keys in the ignition while waiting for her daughter in a ShopRite parking lot.

The suspect PROVIDED

A man then approached the driver's side door, attacked the elderly woman and forced her out of the car before driving away, police said.

The suspect was described as a black man, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 170 pounds with long, braided hair. He was seen wearing a white Phillies baseball jersey, white pants and red shoes.

"We would really, really like to solve this one," a post on the department's Facebook page reads. "The victim could be your mother or your grandmother. We can replace cars, but we can't replace the fear and trauma that this elderly woman unnecessarily had to endure."

Chester County gets its first confirmed case of Zika

The unidentified woman is one of 23 cases of Zika in Pennsylvania.

A Chester County woman who recently traveled to a Zika-affected area is confirmed to have contracted the virus, health officials said.

The woman, who health officials have only described as being over 50 years old, traveled to the Dominican Republic, the Inquirer reported.

She is not pregnant, was not hospitalized and has since recovered.

To date, 23 cases of travel-associated Zika virus have been confirmed in Pennsylvania; there have been no instances of the virus being contracted locally, officials said.

The Chester County Health Department announced a collaboration with the Pennsylvania Department of Health and the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection in response to the case. All county health care providers have been issued alerts and information regarding reducing the risk of Zika's spread.

Chester County Health Department Director Jeanne Casnor said there's minimal risk of contracting Zika from mosquitoes in Chester County.

"For anyone traveling to countries affected by the Zika virus, we urge caution and note that pregnant women in particular should avoid travel to affected countries," Casner said in a statement.

Pa. state House passes 20-week abortion ban

A politically charged bill that seeks to restrict abortions in Pennsylvania after 20 weeks, or five months, passed through the House on Tuesday, and now heads to the Senate for approval.

House Bill 1948, introduced by Rep. Kathy Rapp, R-Warren, would overturn the current state ban on abortions after 24 weeks, or six months.

It also would criminalize dilation and evacuation abortions (D&E), a second-trimester procedure recommended for women with fetuses with severe medical issues if the mother faces life-threatening complications; it's performed by dilating the uterus and removing the fetus in parts.

After nearly two hours of floor debate, the measure passed 132-65. All but four Philadelphia County legislators — Republican Reps. John Taylor, Martina A. White, Thomas P. Murt and Democratic Rep. Stephen Kinsey — opposed the controversial bill.

In Tuesday's heated debate, Rep. Jordan Harris, D-Philadelphia, said making the decision is hard enough already for women and families without "government putting our nose … in women's uteruses."

But supporters say this bill is a necessary step to preventing fetuses from feeling pain during abortion procedures. Congress, meanwhile, is considering a national 20-week ban, according to Planned Parenthood. The nonprofit organization says these bans are part of an agenda to "chip away at abortion access," targeting abortions by pregnancy term or method, like D&E.

"We must end the inhumane practice of dismemberment abortion," said Rapp, referring to D&E. Rapp has previously sponsored House Bill 1077, which mandated a preabortion ultrasound test.

Gov. Tom Wolf has said he will veto the bill even if the Senate OKs the measure.

"This legislation would be a step back for women," Wolf said at a news conference in April. "This legislation would be a huge step back for Pennsylvania. If this legislation reaches my desk, I will veto it."

Currently, women in Pennsylvania must receive state-directed counseling and require a 24-hour waiting period before the procedure is performed, according to the Guttmacher Institute. For public employees, insurance policies only cover abortion in cases of life endangerment, rape or incest. ALEXIS SACHDEV

"We must end the inhumane practice of dismemberment abortion."

States with bans at 20 weeks

If approved, Pennsylvania would join 14 states with 20-week abortion bans: Alabama, Arkansas, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nebraska, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

But Pennsylvania would be the first in the Northeast to adopt such a measure.

Gallup: Same-sex marriages up, domestic partnerships down

The results are based on Gallup interviews conducted during the past year.

Nearly half of gay and lesbian couples living together in the United States are married a year after the Supreme Court's decision to legalize same-sex marriage across the country, according to a Gallup study released on Wednesday.

The percentage of married cohabiting same-sex couples, as opposed to couples living together but not married, rose to 49 percent from 38 percent before the ruling, Gallup said.

In a ruling on June 26, 2015, the Supreme Court struck down same-sex marriage bans in the 13 states that still prohibited it.

Gallup estimates about 123,000 same-sex American couples married in the past year, with a higher number of the unions taking place in states that already had legalized same-sex marriages.

In total, 9.6 percent of gay and lesbians Americans are married, compared to 7.9 percent before the ruling, Gallup said.

The percentage of same-sex couples living in a domestic partnership has declined to 10.1 percent from 12.8 percent, it said.

"This indicates that while many unmarried same-sex couples who were living together got married in the past year, many others stopped living together or no longer consider themselves to be domestic partners," Gallup said. REUTERS

Justice Dept. unveils 'largest takedown ever' to combat Medicare fraud

The U.S. Justice Department said Wednesday that federal law enforcement officials have hit a milestone in 2016 by completing the "largest takedown ever" against defendants allegedly trying to defraud Medicare and other federal insurance programs.

The 2016 takedown involves 301 defendants and a loss amount of $900 million, the department said. That exceeds a record last year, when 243 defendants faced charges in a combined $712 million in losses.

Among the defendants charged in the takedown include two owners of a group of outpatient clinics and a patient recruiter who stand accused of filing $36 million in fraudulent claims for physical therapy and other services that were not medically necessary.

Attorney General Loretta E. Lynch GETTY IMAGES

To find patients, the Justice Department alleges the clinic operators and the recruiter targeted poor drug addicts and offered them narcotics so they could bill them for services that were never provided.

Another case that was highlighted on Wednesday involved home health fraud. In that case, a doctor was indicted for billing $38 million for home health services that were not needed or ever provided. REUTERS

THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT SAID THAT ABOUT 50 PERCENT OF THE CASES IN THE 2016 TAKE DOWN INVOLVE SOME FORM OF HOME HEALTH FRAUD, AND ABOUT 25 PERCENT INVOLVE PHARMACY FRAUD.

Democrats stage protest to demand gun control bill

The protest was the latest bold move by Democrats to persuade the Republican majority in Congress to consider gun control legislation.

A photo shot and tweeted from the floor of the House by Rhode Island Rep. David Cicilline shows Democratic members of the House of Representatives staging a sit-in on the House floor to demand action on commonsense gun legislation. U.S. REP. DAVID CICILLINE/HANDOUT

Several dozen House Democrats pushing for action on gun control protested on the floor of the House of Representatives on Wednesday, chanting "no bill, no break!" and demanding that the chamber put off an upcoming recess until legislation is debated.

The Democrats stood or sat at the front of the chamber, where such disruptive tactics are relatively rare. When the presiding House officer, Republican Rep. Ted Poe, entered the chamber, he declared the House not in order. After banging the gavel several times in an attempt to clear the protesters, he announced the chamber would be in recess and left.

The Democrats remained on the House floor, calling for action before a vacation recess scheduled to start at the end of the week and run through July 5.

Shortly before that, Assistant Democratic Leader James Clyburn, likened the push for gun control action to the civil rights movement of the 1960s when sit-ins and other civil disobedience prodded Washington to act on new protections for African-Americans.

Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton tweeted her support for the sit-in, saying, "This is what real leadership looks like."

House Democrats frustrated by inaction on guns have staged several actions on the House floor in recent days. They have interrupted a moment of silence in honor of the Orlando victims and unsuccessfully seeking recognition to bring up bills on expanding background checks and preventing people on "no-fly" and other surveillance lists from buying guns.

Democrats in the Senate last week took control of that chamber for nearly 15 straight hours as they called for gun control legislation.

House Republicans have declined to advance gun control legislation and House Speaker Paul Ryan said earlier on Wednesday he was "waiting to see what the Senate does" before discussing the topic. REUTERS

ESA head: Human flights to Mars still at least 15 years off

Dreaming of a trip to Mars? You'll have to wait at least 15 years for the technology to be developed, the head of the European Space Agency said, putting doubt on claims that the journey could happen sooner.

"If there was enough money then we could possibly do it earlier, but there is not as much now as the Apollo program had," ESA Director-General Jan Woerner said, referring to the U.S. project which landed the first people on the moon.

Woerner says a permanent human settlement on the moon, where 3-D printers could be used to turn moon rock into essential items needed for the two-year trip to Mars, would be a major step toward the red planet.

Mars UNIVERSAL HISTORY ARCHIVE/GETTY IMAGES

NASA hopes to send astronauts to Mars in the mid-2030s and businessman Elon Musk, head of electric car maker Tesla Motors, says he plans to put unmanned spacecraft on Mars from as early as 2018 and have humans there by 2030.

The ESA's Woerner said it would take longer.

A spacecraft sent to Mars would need rockets and fuel powerful enough to lift back off for the return trip and the humans would need protection from unprecedented physical and mental challenges as well as deep-space radiation.

Woerner would like to see a cluster of research laboratories on the moon, at what he calls a "moon village," to replace the International Space Station when its lifetime ends and to test technologies needed to make the trip to Mars.

That could be funded and operated by a collection of private and public bodies from around the world, he said in an interview at the ESA's Operations Center. REUTERS

Blake Lively stands by her 'Oakland booty' comment

Blake Lively finally responded to the heat she received last month after the actress posted a photo of herself on Instagram in a sleek gold gown with the caption, "L.A. face with an Oakland booty," a line from Sir-Mix-Alot's hit song "Baby Got Back."

One Instagrammer raged: "Another day, another rich white woman using women of color's bodies as a punch line and commodity — yet everyone defends her and calls it confidence. But hey who the f*ck am I to check her privilege! #WhiteGirlsDoItBest"

But the responses weren't all vilifying, including one from Sir-Mix-Alot himself. The rapper, who came to Lively's defense, calls her caption "a nod of approval. That's was what I wanted. I wanted our idea of beautiful to be accepted."

Lively herself went on Sway Calloway's show to address the issue. "I never meant to offend anyone," she said. "I was celebrating my body. It's nice to have a nice curve and not look like you're starving to death."

Despite, all the chaos, Lively is staying positive and even announced that she and hubby, Ryan Reynolds are "official breeders." The two come from very big families and want to have a full house of their own. So, there! She wins!

Selma Blair is a 'flawed human'

After her in-flight meltdown Monday, which was one of the most bizarre celebrity stories we've heard in a while, Selma Blair released an apology.

"I made a big mistake yesterday," the actress said in a statement to Vanity Fair. "After a lovely trip with my son and his dad, I mixed alcohol with medication, and that caused me to black out say and do things that I deeply regret."

To recap, some of those regretful moments included crying and saying scary things like: "He burns my private parts… He's going to kill me."

Fortunately for the actress, she says her son, who was on the flight, was asleep.

"There is that saving grace," she said. "I take this very seriously, and I apologize to all of the passengers and crew that I disturbed and am thankful to all of the people who helped me. I am a flawed human being who makes mistakes and am filled with shame over this incident. I am truly very sorry."

Iggy Azalea drives a hard bargain

When famous people break up with each other, the stakes are always a little higher than they are for the rest of us normal folks. Rapper Iggy Azalea may not be making hits as of late, but she sure is making headlines — breaking up with her fiance, Lakers point guard Nick Young, yesterday in the most epic way possible.

Since leaving his things in the driveway of their Los Angeles home to be picked up by a U-Haul, the two have come to an agreement — she gives back the 10.43 carat engagement ring, valued at half a million dollars, and he gives back the '62 Impala that Azalea gave Young as a present.

Here's the rub, though — by California law, Azalea had to give back the ring anyway. Young could have kept that sweet, classic car. Oops.

Looks like the "Fancy" rapper is "passing the bar like a lawyer."

Should have done your homework, Young!

Kate Winslet joins the next Woody Allen, prompts complicated feelings

Kate Winslet is going to make her first Woody Allen movie! Or wait: Maybe we should dial back that enthusiasm. In any other year this news would be cause for cheer — a legendary filmmaker, with a long track record of directing women to Oscars, working with one of the very finest. But this is 2016, when we may have finally turned on Woody Allen. The allegations plaguing him for 25 years have never been proved or cleared, but the public seems to have decided, at long last, that we can no longer watch "Annie Hall" or "Bananas" or even "September" without wondering if the man who made them is worst kind of villain.

Winslet will probably be excellent in whatever it's eventually called. But will people want to see a new Woody Allen movie? We'll find out when his latest, "Cafe Society," comes out in a few weeks.

In praise of collecting

Don't judge people with too many Daenerys toys. FUNKO

I'm moving to a new apartment. I hate moving; you probably do, too. I'm starting to snarl at packing tape in the grocery store, and my hands are covered in paper cuts from cardboard boxes. It's all I'm talking about this week. (I'm lots of fun at parties.) When I told someone about the 78 boxes I packed yesterday, they seemed stunned. "What the heck could you possibly have in there?" Well, a lot of them are full of toys and collectibles.

Now, before you laugh or groan about the spouse you have who could have said the same thing, let me defend collecting.

My collection is geek stuff. There are DC Bombshells, space helmets, Joker statues and a Rocket Raccoon mask that talks. There are endless Pop Vinyl figures, a gold coin from a pirate show set visit and numerous sonic screwdrivers (though you need an actual screwdriver to change the batteries). That's just to name a few things. It's not all expensive stuff, and there is really no theme. It's just stuff I love. Between my boyfriend's geek collection and mine, it's like a comic book shop in here.

As we approach yet another convention, I can guarantee I'll be adding to it. Maybe just one little piece, but there is something lovely about the joy of finding that one special item that makes your desk look just a bit more like Disneyland. Sure, some people can take collecting too far, but for those of us who love it, the search is as much fun as having the item at home.

There are all kinds of theories about why we collect things. Some people say it's the thrill of the hunt. Some claim that seeing the Samurai Darth Vader made out of motorcycle parts on your desk calms anxiety. (That is a thing. I'm looking at it right now.) Some say the items remind you of fond memories of a film or a friend. Others just love to decorate their homes in a way that might horrify their parents and make it a haven of things they adore.

So, if your significant other or roomie comes home with yet another Daenerys statue, before you flip out and ask why they needed a ninth one, stop for a second. Ask them why they do it. Ask why they love it. Then get out there and maybe start your own collection. Happy hunting!

"HEATHERS"

Winona Ryder and Christian Slater made a fine, sarcastic team in 1988's "Heathers." PROVIDED

Remember high school movies? They're thin on the ground these days, meaning the kids might have to reach back to older teen films whose stars are now pushing 50. The ones made by John Hughes are weirdly undying. But far more respectable than "Sixteen Candles" and "The Breakfast Club" is the one dropped into that nice and peppy era. "Heathers," with Winona Ryder and Christian Slater offing demonic popular girls and dumb jocks, was both a bomb, in that it tanked at the box office, and a ticking time bomb, in that it eventually destroyed an entire genre. Once it bloomed on home video, it created a generation of smart alecks, quick to deploy sarcasm and make jokes about cow-tipping. Yes, it birthed the likes of "Mean Girls," but it's always better to go back to the source.

"CAPE FEAR"

Robert De Niro in "Cape Fear" UNIVERSAL PICTURES

The story goes that Martin Scorsese got to make "Goodfellas" only if he agreed to do a splashy remake of this classic 1962 Robert Mitchum-Gregory Peck thriller. Time has proved "Goodfellas" the real classic. But 25 years later we can see his "one for them" entry was no soulless sellout piece. It's a for-hire work where the filmmaker really brought it. "Cape Fear" features some of Scorsese's most keyed-up and arresting set pieces, plus a sturdy foundation of anguish and guilt as Nick Nolte's lawyer is taunted by the newly freed con (Robert De Niro) he wrongfully put in the slammer.

Tom Kitt on why economics is a good major for a composer

The popular musical is being performed at the Kimmel Center this week.

MARIALENA RAGO
letters@metro.us

What if you could see where your choices took you? That is the idea behind the hit musical "If/Then", currently being performed at the Kimmel Center. The musical follows Elizabeth as she returns to New York City and is faced with choices that ultimately affect her life. We chat with Tony winning composer, Tom Kitt about what makes this show so special as well as some of his musical influences.

What makes "If/Then" different from the other shows you have written in the past?

First and foremost would be the basic conception of this — of the story telling. I have never written a show where we basically told two stories at once. With a character's life split into two so theatrically, we had to figure out a language for that magical realism.

I read that you went to school for economics. How did you end up in musical theatre?

There is a joke I make that if anyone asks me how they pursue a life in the arts, I just say major in economics. My father was an economist and had a very successful career working in antitrust. It was his suggestion and it was a really wonderful one. I really loved that major. I am glad I did it cause I think that seeds of "If/Then" definitely started in college with that experience. But in my heart I always wanted to pursue music. That is what I was dreaming of at a very early age.

What do you think makes you and Brian Yorkey such a good team?

Well, I think it's a marriage. We can say anything to each other. We celebrate each other, but we also get into little arguments with one another. We know that at the end of the day there is great love and affection. There is nothing we can't say. I really trust him with everything. He keeps me real and true to who I am and what I am writing. Every time I get a lyric from him, it inspires music in me right there and then.

What do you want Philly theatre-goers to gain from watching "If/Then?"

I hope audiences will feel empowered and will walk out of the theatre wanting to talk about the show. Feeling like, "Here I am now in this moment. Here are these choices in front of me and I feel excited about that." Wanting to truly live and make bold and passionate choices and to really be grateful for that.

"If/Then" is being performed at the Kimmel Center from June 21 to 26.

There's wine beyond Napa

Check out these under-the-radar North American wine regions.

Fodor's Travel

New York has its own wine region in the Finger Lakes. GETTY IMAGES

While we love Napa and Sonoma, there are many other wine regions to visit without leaving the continent that are just as beautiful. From British Columbia to North Carolina, these less crowded, more adventurous destinations allow you the chance to discover new wines in an intimate setting. Explore the accompanying scenic landscape and chow down on great food for a multi-faceted experience of terroir.

Finger Lakes, New York

Fly into Syracuse to explore the 11 pristine lakes and more than 120 wineries here. The cool climate is famous for aromatic riesling and Gewurztraminer, although Fulkerson Winery, Bloomer Creek Vineyard and Heart & Hands Wine Co. are also producing great cabernet franc and pinot noir. Tasting appointments are not needed, but you'll want to book ahead for the Water to Wine tour, a wine-centered cruise around Cayuga Lake.

Guadalupe Valley, Mexico

Follow bumpy dirt roads to find gourmet restaurants, more than 50 new and old wineries, and charming bed and breakfasts in Mexico's premier wine region. Begin your journey at the Vine & Wine Museum in the heart of the valley to learn about Baja California's wine culture and viticulture history before visiting L.A. Cetto, one of Mexico's oldest and most respected wineries and the largest producer in the country. Stop at new sustainable winery Clos de Tres Cantos followed by Adobe Guadalupe for a horseback ride through the vineyards.

Eastern Townships, Quebec

This new wine region just an hour's drive from Montreal has two primary wine routes: Route des vins de Brome-Missisquoi with more than 20 vineyards, and the smaller Route des vins de l'Estrie comprising seven vineyards. Domaine des Cotes d'Ardoise was the first winery to open here in 1980 and a wonderful place to taste red wine made from hybrid Marechal Foch, De Chaunac and Chelois grapes while taking a stroll along the flowered paths and sculpture gardens. Visit Vignoble de l'Orpailleur, the largest winery in Quebec, for award-winning ice wine.

Yadkin Valley, North Carolina

North Carolina has historically been best known for producing tobacco, but many former tobacco farmers have turned to grapes. There are now more than 160 wineries in the state, mostly concentrated in the Yadkin Valley, 90 minutes northwest of Charlotte. Shelton Vineyards is the original and largest winery, while many smaller wineries shine with esoteric grape varietals. Jones von Drehle has an excellent Petit Manseng while JOLO makes an award-winning Chambourcin rosé. Red wine lovers will enjoy McRitchie's Ring of Fire blend.

Santa Barbara, California

The humility and pure passion of winemakers here is a far cry from the uptight tasting rooms and manicured feel of Napa Valley. Life here is still bucolic, romantic and uncomplicated. Sample flights of award-winning estate-grown wines from Dierberg and Star Lane Vineyard at their joint tasting room in the Santa Rita Hills. Then try the Rhone-style wines at Qupe; their elegantly spicy syrah is a favorite.

Okanagan Valley, British Columbia

The 164 wineries in the vast Okanagan Valley plant everything from merlot and pinot gris to cabernet franc and Gewurztraminer. Several wineries, including Burrowing Owl and Quails' Gate have guest rooms and farm-to-table restaurants on site. You'll want to check out Nk'Mip Cellars, North America's first Aboriginal-owned winery, as well as Platinum Bench Estate Winery, which doubles as an artisan breadmaker and sells local cheese and charcuterie for picnics.

Willamette Valley, Oregon

Willamette Valley might be the most recognized region on this list. Pinot noir is the name of the game in this cool climate, which is often compared to Burgundy. While the grape is used predominantly to make red wine, Soter Vineyards also makes an excellent brut rosé in the traditional Champagne method. Oregon is at the forefront of biodynamic farming; Bergstrom and Left Coast Cellars are great examples. Several wineries, including Adelsheim and Left Coast Cellars are making a less common but crisp and food-friendly pinot blanc, too.

Norway's coolest experiences

It's more than fjord-hopping.

Fodor's Travel

Beauty comes in many forms throughout the year in Norway, where picturesque scenery beckons visitors to experience its lovely, vibrant coast and out-of-the-ordinary attractions.

Bergen, Norway GETTY IMAGES

Thief Island

Among other things, Oslo has used its strong economy to invest in and improve its neighborhoods. The long-term Fjord City Project has rebuilt Oslo's waterfront and skyline, and made a world-renowned, design-forward neighborhood out of Thief Island (so named for being a prison islet centuries ago). Visitors now stroll its promenade, eat at its sleek restaurants, stay at the uber-chic hotel The Thief and visit the Astrup Fearnley Museum, one of the world's elite modern-art institutions.

Bergen

Second in population only to Oslo, Bergen offers plenty of distinctive sights and culture. Visiting the UNESCO-protected Bryggen ("wharf" in Norwegian) is a must. There, the quaint, colorful wooden row buildings date back to the 18th century. Nearby, take the Ulriken643 cable car to the top of the highest of Bergen's famous Seven Mountains, where you can dine on Norwegian fare at the lofty Floien Folkerestaurant while enjoying the panoramic harbor view.

Hurtigruten Cruise

Norway's stunning coastline is best seen from the water, and Hurtigruten is a favorite way to see it. Part cruise ship, part ferry, part commercial vessel, these boats serve travelers and locals alike. Hurtigruten offers offshore excursions at ports from Bergen to Alesund to Trondheim and many more, with activities, educational talks and other onboard events to liven up a week cruising the Arctic waters.

Northern Lights

One of the driving forces to visit the far north is the beguiling wonder of the aurora borealis. September through April are good months to catch sight of them, but the best odds are in January and February. Check out the highly accurate forecasts of NorwayLights.com, which has hour-by-hour predictions.

North Cape

One of Norway's — and the world's — most breathtaking cliffs is the North Cape, or Nordkapp, which marks the northernmost point of continental Europe. Join a tour from the port city of Honningsvag for the half-hour ride to the cape, where you can explore a subterranean exhibition, grab lunch and of course, snap your photo with the iconic Globe monument.

Kirkenes Snowhotel

The far northern city of Kirkenes, a few miles from the Russian border, is home to the Snowhotel. Guests can book rooms in climate-controlled cabins all year — or in chillier months, spend the night in a cold room, sculpted from snow and ice. Either way, don't miss an afternoon exploring the fjords (iced over in winter) followed by fireside dining in a rustic cabin.

5 Reasons why NBA draft day will be a holiday for Sixers fans in Philly

The Sixers hope they begin a new era of competitiveness Thursday night.

EVAN MACY
evan.macy@metro.us

Thursday is the day "the Process" transitions into real expectations.

It's harder to get lower into the depths of losing and despair than the last three years for Sixers fans. But when they announce they've selected Ben Simmons No. 1 overall at approximately 7:35 Thursday night, the team will be, finally, shifting its focus. It's time to win.

It's reason for Sixers fans to celebrate, and all across the city Thursday night fans will be watching and looking to the future.

Here are five reasons why the 2016 NBA Draft will be can't-miss for Philly sports fans.

1 Ben Simmons

Simmons is nearly the prototypical player that GMs are looking for in today's NBA. Everyone wants a big, long, athletic point-forward like Draymond Green or LeBron James. And though his jump shot needs work and there is no guarantee he'll thrive in the NBA, Simmons is one of the most impressive prospects in recent memory.

Philly will add Simmons to a roster filled with potential and assets, with big men, draft picks and cash to sign free agents. Just watch him drive the lane, find ways to score and dish the ball with no-look passes. The next era of success in the Wells Fargo Center won't be far off.

Ben Simmons already seems to be comfortable in the spotlight. GETTY IMAGES

2 Trade watch

A pair of blockbuster trades have already seen Derrick Rose traded to the Knicks and Jeff Teague traded to the Pacers. The Sixers have been involved in trade talks with the Celtics (looking to get the third pick to take Kris Dunn) and many expect the squad to part ways with either Nerlens Noel or Jahlil Okafor before draft night is through.

Things could get a bit crazy with draft night trades as a large number of teams are looking to redefine their identities this offseason.

3 The party

The Sixers are pulling out all the stops Thursday night in Center City. In the shadow of the Philadelphia Museum of Art, Allen Iverson, Julius Erving and a cast of thousands will celebrate the night with music, free food and photo ops. There will also be an amateur slam dunk contest, judged by Sixers legends.

Bobby Jones, Clarence Weatherspoon, Eric Snow and World B. Free will also be guests at the event, held at Eakins Oval. The 4,000 attending Sixers fans will receive free T-shirts, courtesy of DraftKings.

4 The outfits

The NBA draft has become a fashion show for young men wearing tailored suits. Whether there's a bright pinstripe three-piece, a jacket with a logo sewn inside or an unusual fabric or pattern, the draft is the first opportunity for most prospects on hand to be introduced to NBA fans and make a statement about their personality and taste.

5 The next step

About one week after the draft, the offseason begins for potential free agents on July 1. And while Philly might not be a major player for the cream of the crop — guys like Dirk Nowitski, Dwight Howard or Kevin Durant — they have a lot of money to spend and could be a valuable destination for a young free agent.

NBA mock draft | by Matt Burke

76ers: Ben Simmons, SF

Simmons and the Sixers ruined everyone's fun on Tuesday when it became a lock that he's going No. 1. So much for drama, but the Sixers certainly don't need any more of that.

Lakers: Brandon Ingram, SF

The same boredom happened with the Lakers and Ingram at No. 2. Ingram remains the clear-cut second best player in this draft. If the Lakers are patient and don't trade this pick, there's a very good chance Ingram will be the cornerstone player in L.A.

Celtics: Jaylen Brown, SF

Expect the Celtics to make people raise their eyebrows here, either with a trade or by taking someone not named Dragan Bender, Kris Dunn or Buddy Hield. Brown could be the second-coming of Paul Pierce in Boston.

Suns: Dragan Bender, PF

Everyone's screaming that Bender is the next Kristaps Porzingis simply because Porzingis is the last international lottery pick that we saw. No one has a clue on whether or not European players will work out.

T-Wolves: Jamal Murray, SG

Great shooters are in vogue right now thanks to the Splash Bros. at Golden State, but getting two guys who can shoot like that on the same team is rare. Minnesota could use a shooter so it might be a good fit.

Pelicans: Kris Dunn, PG

The Pelicans are still searching for that second star to place next to big man Anthony Davis. Dunn has been vocal about where he doesn't want to play (Boston and Phoenix) but he seems as though he may have a liking for the Big Easy.

Nuggets: Buddy Hield, SG

The sharp-shooting Hield would fit in nicely with Danilo Gallinari, Emmanuel Mudiay and Kenneth Faried. Hield is the type of player who should be able to contribute right away and the Nuggets could potentially land in the postseason next year.

Kings: Marquese Chriss, PF

Chriss has skyrocketed up draft boards in the past few months and it's easy to understand why. At 6-foot-10, he might be the most athletic player in this year's draft.

Raptors: Skal Labissiere, PF

Legendary college coach John Calipari is hyping him up, but that's what John Calipari does with former Kentucky guys. Labissiere was highly unimpressive in his one season with the Wildcats, but he's certainly not done growing as a player.

Bucks: Henry Ellenson, PF

Marquette star Henry Ellenson is compared to Brian Scalabrine and Brian Cardinal (two white guys) on NBADraft.net. This is because Ellenson is also white and looks like a Scalabrine/Cardinal love child.

Magic: Jakob Poeltl, PF

Poeltl is another player who runs the floor well for a man his size (7-foot-1) but that basically describes all big men in the NBA these days. There's a reason guys like Kendrick Perkins can't get big contracts.

Jazz: Deyonta Davis, PF

Davis looked limited at Michigan State as he rarely left the paint but he's shown he can step back and hit outside jumpers during workouts. The Jazz are guard-heavy so expect them to go with size when they make their first-round selection.

Suns: Domantas Sabonis, PF

Everyone hopes this works out as Domantas' dad, Arvydas, was a pleasure to watch. The guy passed out of the post like no other. The big concern with Domantas is his lack of athleticism.

Bulls: Bryce Johnson, PF

The Bulls could wind up going with a guard if they are to trade away Jimmy Butler and/or Derrick Rose, but when in doubt go with the best player available. That's Johnson, who was a rebounding machine for the Tar Heels.

Nuggets: Timothe Luwawu, SG

Luwawu did a Q&A with DenverNuggets.com and said he doesn't like to compare himself to other players but did say he likes watching Paul George. He also likes when fans are crazy, "like in Serbia."

Celtics: Furkan Korkmaz, SG

The Celtics need shooters like you read about and Korkmaz would help ail that situation in the Boston back court. The C's have plenty of guards who can guard and that's Korkmaz's weakness.

More from first round

- 17 — Grizzlies: Denzel Valentine, SG
- 18 — Pistons: Tyler Ulis, PG
- 19 — Nuggets: Taurean Prince, SF
- 20 — Pacers: Malachi Richardson, SG
- 21 — Hawks: Thon Maker, C
- 22 — Hornets: Wade Baldwin, SG
- 23 — Celtics: Diamond Stone, C

Aries Reduce stress by helping someone you care about. What you learn from the experience will help you come up with a plan that will solve a personal dilemma.

Taurus Focus more on doing things and spend less time making assumptions or letting your emotions reign. Get involved in something that allows you to show off your skills.

Gemini You can figure things out as you go. Procrastination will lead you nowhere fast. It's up to you to make decisions and follow them with actions.

Cancer Stick to your plans and honor your promises. Someone depending on you will be grateful for your help and will reward you with something quite unexpected.

Leo Stay calm, regardless of what others do or say. It's up to you to maintain a professional attitude and do whatever you can to bring about positive change.

Virgo Get involved in activities that will test your stamina. Physical improvements will encourage you to make a romantic suggestion that will promote a happier personal life.

Libra Invest in your future. Education, networking, traveling and bringing about overdue changes to the way you do things and your overall direction will be fruitful. Trust in your instincts.

Scorpio Pick up information and make personal changes that will lead to new opportunities. Love and romance are encouraged and will set the stage for a better future.

Sagittarius Double-check any information you are given. Ask questions and offer suggestions. Don't be a follower when you should be taking the lead and doing things your way.

Capricorn You'll be drawn to an interesting prospect. Your insight and ability to size matters up and act quickly will put you in a good position for advancement.

Aquarius A serious approach to the changes you want to make at home will bring good results. Make an emotional plea to someone you know can help you achieve your goal.

Pisces Don't let anyone stifle your plans. Make changes at home that will ease your stress and make you happy. It's a good day to negotiate and sign contracts. EUGENIA LAST
